AvMA (Action against Medical Accidents) has appointed emis intellectual technology to act as its IT partner in delivering a fully integrated contact, file, activity, knowledge and relationship management system.

This will help AvMA's 25 full time and volunteer staff perform it's core charitable activities of providing advice to those affected by medical accidents even more effectively and quickly.

It will also assist with AvMA's other roles which include acting as an accreditor of specialist solicitors, risk advisors, provider of references to experts and in its educational activities (including publishing and seminars)

Hugh Williams who is Deputy Chief Executive at AvMA said: "We are pleased to be working with emis intellectual technology and are excited by the improvements that will be made. The new systems will bring huge efficiency gains for the organisation and allow us to make significant improvements to our service as well as strengthen our policy and campaigning work."
