Emis intellectual technology - Finding Niches

Leeds based emis intellectual technology have partnered with Cheshire's Dyne Solicitors Limited to again prove that there is more to Seneca CM than bulk workflow driven contact, file and activity management. Dyne Solicitors will be using the entirety of Seneca CM across all staff and work areas.

"This is one that we really want to tell everyone about..."

says Chris Spencer - emis' Development Director.

"... It paints a clear picture that Seneca will allow a firm to get to grips with any kind of work or process and, rather than just focussing on some of the high profile and highly coveted major wins we've had of late, we'd really like to draw attention to the fact that Seneca offers this level of flexibility – which is why Dyne Solicitors have chosen to work with us."

John Dyne – Managing Director of the firm is also feeling positive.

"We looked at Seneca's product and realised it was just what we needed to promote consistency and build on efficiencies across the practice. We compared Seneca's product to our existing accounts and case management systems and all those involved with the process, including administrative staff, gave Seneca the green light. We are therefore delighted to be working with emis and look forward to running Seneca across all departments in the near future."

We have built our firm's reputation and standing on clear focus and expertise. So when we saw a system that does as much as Seneca and which complements and improves the way we work we instinctively felt it offered the right solution for us."

Dyne Solicitors will go live with Seneca before the end of 2006
